The Final Verse

From British shores to southern seas,
They walked a path of melody.
With his true wife, his loving guide,
They built a family side by side.

Three daughters brought him total joy,
A bond that time could not destroy.
"In My Life" the notes still play,
Of family milestones along the way.

The Beatles played their timeless track,
Bringing a lifetime's memories back—
A love they shared, so strong and true,
That carried them across the blue.

The music fades, the record stills,
Across the green New Zealand hills.
But in four hearts, his rhythm stays,
To play through all their living days.
